

In New Mexico, we cherish our wildlife, which is deeply tied to our cultural traditions and helps sustain our $2.4 billion outdoor recreation economy through hunting, fishing, birdwatching, and more.

Our Department of Game & Fish staff is doing a good job, but our current wildlife management system is outdated and underfunded, while our State Game Commission has been politicized.

This session, we must pass a reform package to give the Department of Game & Fish the tools, authority, and funding to build a 21st-century wildlife management system for future generations.
